Introduction

Today, owning and managing a successful car dealership can present many challenges such as matching customer expectations and staying on top of constantly increasing competition. Since they first opened as small shop in 1976, today, First State is a state of the art Chevrolet dealership, offering Chevy's full line up of vehicles. With more than four decades in the car industry, First State was looking for ways to reduce energy costs.

The Problem

-  Increasing energy costs
-  Budget uncertainty
-  Fluctuating energy bills

As an organization, they were looking for better/lower energy rates as a way to reduce their operational costs, and have better prediction over their budgets.

The Solution

Thanks to our relationship with top-tier energy providers, we were able to find electrical rates lower than those offered by their local utility, helping them immediately reduce costs.

First introduced to us in 2014, we've since helped them secure fixed low electricity rates through 2025. Providing them over a decade of savings, complete budget prediction, and putting energy costs in their hands.
